

The Secretary of State for Defence, Mr Philip Hammond MP, today told Parliament that the next roulement of UK forces in Afghanistan (Op Herrick 19) is due to take place in October 2013. Around half of these units will form Task Force Helmand under the command of 7th Armoured Brigade. The remainder will deploy within Helmand and also to other locations in Afghanistan - particularly Kandahar and Kabul - as part of the UK's overall contribution. The forces deploying are listed on the next page.

In addition to the list of formed units, individual augmentees from each of the Services will continue to deploy as part of this integrated force package. In total we expect around 1119 individual augmentees to deploy on operations. This will be comprised of

246 Royal Navy personnel,

370 Army personnel and

503 Royal Air Force personnel

The Royal Air Force currently provides the command element of Headquarters Joint Force Support (Afghanistan), with the wider headquarters manned by Individual Augmentees from all three Services. 101 Logistic Brigade will deploy in November to take on this role.

Volunteer and ex-Regular members of the Reserve Forces will continue to deploy to Afghanistan as part of this integrated force package, and we expect to issue around 400 call-out notices. On completion of their mobilisation procedures, the reservists will undertake a period of training and, where applicable, integration with their respective receiving units. The majority will serve on operations for around six months although a small proportion of any force which is stood down due to force level reductions is likely to be reservist.

As the Prime Minister announced in December 2012, the UK's conventional force levels in Afghanistan will drawdown to around 5,200 by the end of 2013, from the current level of around 7,900. As part of this drawdown, there will be around 6,000 personnel in Afghanistan from Autumn 2013. However, this figure may fluctuate and occasionally exceed this total due to Relief in Place and additional surges into theatre.

As announced by the Defence Secretary on 14 May 2013, some elements of 7th Armoured Brigade will deploy on Op HERRICK 19 for up to eight months. This will remove the requirement to train and deploy an extra Brigade, at greatly reduced scale, to cover the final months of 2014. It will also align tours to key milestones in the transition process, such as the Afghan presidential elections in Spring 2014. A small number of reservists may voluntarily serve eight months.

A further statement on 7th Armoured Brigade's planned replacement formation, 20th Armoured Brigade, nearer the time of their deployment.
